The ANZAC Mothers

No glory for us, the mothers, as the bugles thrill the air;
Just an empty ache, eternal and a face so lined with care.
No joy in the brilliant flowers, as the reverent wreaths are laid;
But thoughts of a child in a garden and the shocking price we paid.

No comradeship to lean on, as the men returning home;
We just fulfil our daily roles and suffer the pain alone.
No reminisce of battles, with those that fought there too;
Or sharing of the cheerful cup and friendships to renew.

The quiet tears at evening before elusive sleep;
The cruel light of morning; the sun and memories creep
Over the sill of a humble house or the door of a mansion grand;
For a day a year, we walk at dawn; strong sisters hand in hand.
When the ceremonies are over and homeward is all that's left;
our grief like a shroud we carry, to a sad, quiet place bereft.
The potential that had no chances; the love that could never bloom;
The fun that never happened; young lives, lost too soon.

The pain of a birth remembered; so sharp but eased by joys.
Fate had other cards to play and gamble with our boys.
They died together, like brothers, in a desperate hail of lead.
We are the war-torn mothers; think; our blood too was shed.

- Jim Morris

Thank you to those that contributed to the ANZAC service last week. With over 100 people attending it obviously means a lot to the Tarras community to remember those who fought and lost their lives in the wars. A special thank you to the organisers and helpers of the annual tribute. Thank you too, to Rev Damon Plimmer who led the service, to Suzie Clarkson and Jim Morris, the guest speakers; to Annabel Blaikie and family for their input and to John Perriam for arranging the fly past.
